the Minimum Wages Act, 1948. The responsibility for enforcement of the provisions of Minimum Wages Act in respect of the scheduled employments falling in the State sphere lies on the State Governments. All the State Governments have got the enforcement machinery for this purpose and action against the defaulting employers, as per the provisions of Minimum Wages Act, 1948 is taken by the State Governments as and when any contravention comes to their notice.

(b) and (c) The Studies conducted by Labour Bureau an organisation under the Ministry of Labour have revealed that inadequacy of personnel for the enforcement machinery and inadequacy of transport facility to them, multiplicity of assignments to enforcement personnel and risk to life are some of the reasons for lack of proper implementation of the Minimum Wages Act, 1948.

(d) The Central Government have been impressing upon the State Governments from time to time regarding the urgent need for strengthening the machinery for effective enforcement of the provisions of the Minimum Wages Act, through various National Tripartite Bodies like Indian Labour Conference and State Labour Ministers' Conference etc.
